About the Artist

Pedro de Miguel (El Molar, Madrid, 1951)

A landscape painter par excellence, Pedro de Miguel offers a representation of reality that is at once suggestive, visionary, and sometimes surreal.

“I started with abstraction, and realism doesn’t interest me: it bores me. I need to represent what I see in an imaginative and personal way,” he explains. “What attracts me is the suggestion of the landscape, more than the landscape itself. This allows the viewer to participate. We mustn’t forget that abstraction also exists, especially in nature, when we define a space.” Pedro de Miguel has navigated the stages of his career with a figurative inspiration, while considering painting as an end in itself, an autonomous form of language. He works with materials with generosity and spontaneity, using free gestures and expressive brushstrokes.

His works erase figurative forms until they become intuitive, almost prophetic. In his most recent still life works, inspired by hieroglyphs, magic blends with forms of pictorial riddles in a synthetic and allusive figuration.

His compositions, mostly medium to large in size, are created with acrylics or mixed media and exist at the boundary between figuration and abstraction. They immerse the viewer in a dreamlike world of unsettling atmospheres and evanescent forms. Pedro de Miguel has participated in numerous national and international art fairs, including JUSTMAD (Madrid), Affordable Art Fair Amsterdam and Brussels, among others, which confirms the growing recognition of his work on the contemporary art scene.
